The Directors may rescind a decision to pay a dividend if they decide, before the payment date, that the Company's financial position no longer justifies the payment.

Winding Up

If the Company is wound up, the liquidator may, with the authority of a special resolution, divide among the Shareholders in kind the whole or any part of the property of the Company, and may for that purpose set such value as he or she considers fair upon any property to be so divided, and may determine how the division is to be carried out as between the Shareholders or different classes of Shareholders.

The Company may, subject to the Corporations Act and with the sanction of a special resolution passed at a meeting of Shareholders, or with the written consent of the majority of Shareholders in the affected class, vary or abrogate the rights attaching to Shares.

5.2 Terms and Conditions of the New Options

The New will be issued on the terms of the existing Listed Options with ASX code RHYOA. The terms and conditions of the New Options are described in Annexure A to this Prospectus.

6. RISKS

Participants in the Offers should consider the investment in the context of their individual risk profile for speculative investments, investment objectives and individual financial circumstances. Each participant should consult their own stockbroker, solicitor, accountant or other professional adviser before deciding whether or not to invest in the New Options.

An investment in the New Options should be regarded as very speculative and involves many risks. The New Options carry no guarantee with respect to returns of capital or the market value of those New Options.

If any of the following risks actually occurs, our business, prospects, financial condition and results of operations could be materially and adversely affected, the trading price of the Shares could decline and you could lose all or part of your investment.

6.1 Speculative nature of investment

This Section 6 identifies some (but not all) of the major risks associated with an investment in the Company. There may be other risks which the Directors and/or management of the Company are unaware which may impact upon the Company, its operations and/or the value and performance of the New Options and the Company generally. This is not an exhaustive list of all the relevant risks which may apply, and the risks set out below are not in order of importance. Many of the risks below are outside the control of the Company and its directors. These risks and other risks not specifically referred to below, may in the future materially adversely affect the value of the Company's shares and their performance.

Subscribing for New Options should be regarded as very speculative and involves many risks. The New Options carry no guarantee with respect to returns of capital or the market value of those securities.

Participants in the Offers should carefully consider and evaluate the Company, its assets and its business and whether the Company's Shares are suitable to acquire having regard to their own investment objectives and financial circumstances and taking into consideration the material risk factors, as set out below. Applicants should also read the Company's prior continuous disclosure announcement to the ASX market in order to fully appreciate the risks particular to an investment in the Company and in particular the risks faced by the Company in the continued development and proposed commercialisation of its intellectual property rights.

Any potential investor should be aware that subscribing for New Options involves various risks. The New Options to be issued carry no guarantee with respect to returns of capital or the market value of those shares. The Company's business is in the development and commercialisation of novel cancer clinical diagnostics designed to assess an individual's cancer risk and to detect the presence of disease. The Company is currently commercialising the risk assessment platform branded as geneType™ in Australia and the USA. The Company is also commercialising its lead disease detection product being ColoSTAT®, a simple blood test for the detection of colorectal (bowel) cancer. The Company is also engaged in research and development of our platform technologies into other cancer risk assessment technologies, simple, blood-based cancer diagnostic tests composed of novel protein biomarkers and combinations of proteomic and genomic technologies to create entirely novel product platforms. An investment in the Company should therefore be considered very speculative.

6.2 Business risks associated with the Company

Regulatory registration: The Company has announced that it intends to take a 2-step approach to market access that involves the initial use of regulatory paths in several geographies that allow the Company to offer commercial products through its own ISO15189-qualified laboratory and/or partnership with sophisticated laboratories that allow commercialisation following validation of the assay by that partner's development team. This path is called "in house IVD" and Laboratory Developed Tests (LDT) in Australia and the USA respectively. As a 2nd step, the Company will seek to obtain CE Mark and TGA registration for ColoSTAT® for the new IVDR standards for Australia, UK and EU and FDA approval for the USA. This will involve significant compliance, data and audit work to support the new applications to those regulatory authorities. There is a significant risk that the Company is unable to secure strategic partnerships and that the regulatory authorities do not accept ColoSTAT® dossiers as evidence for a de novo registration and for subsequent registrations for Genetype. Investors should note there is no guarantee the Company will obtain regulatory approval for ColoSTAT® or further approvals for Genetype

Commercialisation risks: While the Company believes it has a sound strategy for market entry to accelerate commercial sales of ColoSTAT® and Genetype, there is still significant risks in the Company's commercialisation strategy of appointing appropriate agent, distributor or strategic partnerships to support the commercialisation of the product in Australia, USA and the United Kingdom.

Sufficiency of funding: The Company has limited financial resources and may need to raise additional funds from time to time to finance the continued research, development and commercialisation of its technology / products and its other longer-term objectives.

The Company's technology / product development and commercialisation activities may never generate the projected revenue, and the Company may never achieve profitability. The Company's ability to raise additional funds will be subject to, among other things, factors beyond the control of the Company and its Directors, including cyclical factors affecting the economy and share markets generally. The Directors can give no assurance that future funds can be raised by the Company on favourable terms, if at all. If for any reason the Company was unable to raise future funds, its ability to achieve its milestones or continue future development / commercialisation of its technology would be significantly affected.

Technology risk: The Company relies upon a range of hosting providers to maintain continuous operation of its technology platforms, servers and hosting services and the cloud-based environment in which it provides its products. There is a risk that these systems may be adversely affected by various factors to cause them to become unavailable. If a hosting provider ceased to offer its services to the Company, this could lead to disruption of service to the Company website and cloud infrastructure. This could lead to potential loss in revenues, as well as adversely affecting the Company's reputation, financial position and performance.

Compliance with Privacy Regulations: In the course of providing the Company's services, the Company will receive identifiable patient data and therefore has the obligations to comply with a series of regulations as to how that data is managed. The Company has an effective Privacy Policy in place but failure to comply with the relevant regulations could be serious. There is a risk that the Company may fail to fully comply with applicable privacy regulations (such as the Australian Privacy Act 1988 or HIPAA etc), due to insufficient data governance, lack of staff training, or inadequate technical safeguards. This could result in regulatory penalties, reputational damage, loss of customer trust, and potential legal action.

Development and commercialisation of intellectual property: The Company relies on its ability to develop and commercialise its intellectual property. A failure to develop and commercialise its intellectual property successfully would lead to a loss of opportunities and adversely impact on the operating results and financial position of the Company. Any third party developing superior technology with greater commercial appeal in the field may harm the future prospects of the Company. The Company's success depends, in part, on its ability to obtain, maintain and protect its intellectual property, including its patents. Actions taken by the Company to protect its intellectual property may not be adequate, complete or enforceable and may not prevent the misappropriation of its intellectual property and proprietary information or deter independent development of similar technologies by others.

Intellectual property: The Company's success depends, in part, on its ability to obtain patents, maintain trade secret protection and operate without infringing the proprietary rights of third parties. Securing rights in technology, manufacturing and patents is an important part of securing potential product value in the outcomes of medical device research, development and commercialisation. Competition in retaining and sustaining protection of technology and the complex nature of technologies can lead to patent disputes.

Because the patent position of medical device companies can be highly uncertain and frequently involves complex legal and factual questions, neither the breadth of claims allowed in medical device patents, nor their enforceability can be predicted. There can be no assurance that any patents which the Company may own, access or control will afford the Company commercially significant protection of its technology, its products or their commercial application, or that access to these patents will mean that the Company will be free to commercialise its product.

The granting of a patent does not guarantee that the rights of others are not infringed or that competitors will not develop technology or products to avoid the Company's patented technology. The Company does not guarantee that current submitted intellectual property, or future submitted intellectual property will be granted in the countries that it has been submitted. The Company's current patenting strategies do not cover all countries which may lead to competition arising in those markets.

Protection of intellectual property: The Company may also suffer damage if former employees infringe its intellectual property rights or assert their moral rights. The granting of a patent does not guarantee that the Company's intellectual property is protected and that others will not develop similar technologies that circumvent such patents. There can be no assurance that any patents Rhythm owns, controls or licences, whether now or in the future, will give Rhythm commercially significant protection of its intellectual property. Additionally, monitoring unauthorised use of the Company's intellectual property rights is difficult and can be costly. The Company may not be able to detect all unauthorised use of its intellectual property rights. Changes in laws in Australia and other jurisdictions in which Rhythm operates may adversely affect the Company's intellectual property rights.

Third party intellectual property: Other parties may develop and patent substantially similar or substitute products, processes, or technologies to those used by the Company, and other parties may allege that the Company's products incorporate intellectual property rights derived from third parties without their permission. Whilst the Company is not the subject of any claim that its products infringe the intellectual property rights of a third party, allegations of this kind may be received in the future and, if successful, injunctions may be granted against the Company which could materially affect the operation of the Company and the Company's ability to earn revenue, and cause disruption to the Company's services. The defence and prosecution of intellectual property rights lawsuits, proceedings, and related legal and administrative proceedings are costly and time-consuming, and their outcome is uncertain.

Infringement of third-party IP: If a third party accuses the Company of infringing its IP rights or if a third party commences litigation against the Company for the infringement of patent or other IP rights, the Company may incur significant costs in defending such action, whether or not it ultimately prevails. Costs that the Company incurs in defending third party infringement actions would also include diversion of management and technical personnel's time. In addition, parties making claims against the Company may be able to obtain injunctive or other equitable relief that could prevent the Company from further developing discoveries or commercialising its products / technology. In the event of a successful claim of infringement against the Company, it may be required to pay damages and obtain one or more licenses from the prevailing third party. If it is not able to obtain these licenses at a reasonable cost, if at all, it could encounter delays in product introductions and loss of substantial resources while it attempts to develop alternative products / technology. Defence of any lawsuit or failure to obtain any of these licenses could prevent the Company or its partners from commercialising available products / technology and could cause it to incur substantial expenditure.

Research and Development: The Company's future success is dependent on the performance of the Company's product in both laboratory testing and in clinical trials and whether it proves to be an effective diagnostic test. While the results of its prospective clinical trial have been positive, more R&D is required to enable the product to meet increasingly rigorous regulatory hurdles and user requirements. There is no certainty the results will meet or surpass these requirements nor that the test will demonstrate any material benefit or advancement over existing technologies and methods. Additional clinical performance evaluation may be required, and the results of further trials and testing may require a change in strategy. This may include adding or removing biomarkers, algorithm refinement or adaptation to other testing platforms requiring further research and development adding cost and time to potential registration. The Company may change its clinical focus from time to time. This may be precipitated by either the results of technical verification, any additional clinical performance evaluations, or the results from other aspects of the overall research and development program. Potential product sales and revenues may be year/s away, and there is no guarantee that the Company's products will be successful. There is no certainty that the components for the final product will be suitable or sufficiently stable to support longer term reliable and reproducible kit manufacture and performance, requiring further work. Additional R&D may be required to verify the suitability, stability and appropriateness of a variety of antibodies, reagents various proteins, cross reactivity with other cancers, materials, algorithm and software of the ColoSTAT® test kit to a level that meets new regulatory guidelines. Furthermore, while the Company has plans to continue to upgrade through improvement and expansion the Genetype portfolio, there is risk in the ability to complete this work and to maintain the competitiveness of Genetype.

Medical device and In Vitro Diagnostic development generally is associated with a high failure rate. Positive results from key clinical trials cannot be assured and on occasion, initial clinical trial results are not repeated in larger study populations or when the investigational product is launched for routine use. Some jurisdictions require clinical trials to be performed in their own populations and may not approve the commencement of any proposed clinical trials needing to be undertaken. Until the Company is able to provide the appropriate levels of clinical evidence for the ability of the Company's product to improve outcomes in patients, the future success of the product in development remains speculative. Research and development risks include unpredictability of experimental outcomes, the vagaries of biological systems that can cause difficulties or delays in research and development and are key contributors to the inherent uncertainty that surrounds scientific development of novel medical devices and diagnostic tests more generally.

Misuse of data: Data collected through the usage of the Company's products may not be owned by the Company and the Company may have limited control of the usage or decision making made by the holders of that data. There is a risk that users may make decisions, including in relation to the treatment or management of an individual, based on the data that is outside the Company's recommended protocols.

Future product development: The Company has developed its IVD technologies and continues to invest in the R&D of these systems. There is no guarantee that the further development of these systems will be successful. There are a number of inherent risks associated with developing technology systems and related products. The Company gives no guarantee that development milestones will be achieved or that intellectual property will be developed into further products that are commercially exploitable.

Competition: The Company competes against other companies who are developing technologies which are aimed at competing with the Company's technology. The Company faces the risk that (amongst other things) existing competitors could gain market share through aggressive sales and marketing campaigns, product research and development or /price discounting, The Company may fail to anticipate and respond to changing opportunities, technology or customer requirements as quickly as its competitors or new market entrants into the industry could develop products which compete with the Company's products.

Commercial Risk: The Company may, from time to time, consider acquisition, licensing, partnership or other corporate opportunities for its product development programs. There can be no assurance that any such acquisition, licensing, partnership or corporate opportunities can be concluded on terms that are, or are believed by the Company to be, commercially acceptable. In the case of licensing and partnership opportunities, even if such terms are agreed there is a risk that the performance of distributors and the delivery of contracted outcomes by collaborators will not occur due to a range of unforeseen factors relating to environment, technology and market conditions.

Insurance and Uninsured Risks: Although the Company maintains insurance to protect against certain risks in such amounts as it considers to be reasonable, its insurance will not cover all the potential risks associated with its operations and insurance coverage may not continue to be available or may not be adequate to cover any resulting liability. It is not always possible to obtain insurance against all such risks and the Company may decide not to insure against certain risks because of high discounts or other reasons.

Stock Market Volatility: The price of Shares or the New Options may rise or fall depending upon a range of factors beyond the Company's control and which are unrelated to the Company's operational performance. No assurances can be made that the Company's market performance will not be adversely affected by any such market fluctuations or factors. Investors who decide to sell their New Options after the Company's capital raising may not receive the entire amount of their original investment. The price of New Options listed on ASX may also be affected by multiple factors including the Company's financial performance and by changes in the business environment. The New Options carry no guarantee in respect of profitability, dividends, return on capital, or the price at which they may trade on the ASX. No guarantee can be given that the Company's share price will be greater than the issue price.

Value of the New Options: The New Options that are being issued as part of the Offer are issued for no additional consideration or for nominal consideration but require the exercise price for each Option to be paid at the time of exercise. If the prevailing trading price of the Company's shares during the Option's exercise period is lower than the exercise price for the New Options, then it is likely that the New Options will not be exercised. In this case, for investors, the unexercised New Options will not have a value and will lapse on the respective expiry dates of the New Options. If the New Options are not exercised, or only some are exercised, then the Company may not receive the proceeds that would otherwise be generated if Option holders pay the Option exercise price. This possibility may reduce the amount of capital that the Company would receive if all of the New Options are exercised on or before the respective Option expiry dates.

Economic Risks: The Company is exposed to economic factors in the ordinary course of business. A number of economic factors / conditions, both domestic and global, affect the performance of financial markets generally, which could affect the price at which the Company's Shares trade on ASX. Trading prices can be volatile and volatility can be caused by general market risks such as those that have been mentioned. Shares in the Company may trade at or below the price at which they are currently trading on ASX including as a result of any of the factors that have been mentioned, and factors such as those mentioned may also affect the income, expenses and liquidity of the Company. Additionally, the stock market can experience price and volume fluctuations that may be unrelated or disproportionate to the operating performance of the Company.

Forward-Looking Statements: There can be no guarantee that the assumptions and contingencies on which any forward-looking statements, opinions and estimates contained in materials published by the Company are based will ultimately prove to be valid or accurate. The forward-looking statements, opinions and estimates depend on various factors, including known and unknown risks, many of which are outside the control of the Company. Actual performance of the Company may materially differ from forecast performance.

Future potential sales: There is a risk that, even after obtaining regulatory approvals, the Company's products/technologies/algorithm/software may not gain market acceptance among physicians, surgeons, payors, patients, governments, laboratories, hospitals and the medical community. The degree of market acceptance of the Company's approved products will depend on a variety of factors including:

- i. Timing of market introduction, number and clinical profile of competitive products;
- ii. The Company's ability to provide acceptable evidence of the safety and efficacy of its product and the ability to secure the support of key clinicians and physicians for its products;
- iii. Cost-effectiveness compared to existing and new tests;
- iv. Ability to obtain coverage, reimbursement and adequate payment from government bodies, health maintenance organisations and other third-party payers; and
- v. Advances in other competing detection and diagnostic methods

Physicians, patients, payers or the medical community may be unwilling to accept, use or recommend the Company's products which would adversely affect its potential reviews and future profitability. The medical diagnostic industry is highly competitive and involves large, well established, and well-funded corporations. There may also be other aggressive, fast moving start-up companies that emerge in this space.

Manufacturing: Scale-up may present technical difficulties, or even not work at all. Technical difficulties could include the inability to produce medical devices that meet regulatory specifications or the production from manufacturing batches may be insufficient to conduct the clinical studies and/or laboratory based and/or clinical trial testing. Licensing and manufacturing agreements may be required, with no certainty that these will be completed in a timely manner or on appropriate commercial terms. Any unforeseen difficulty relating to manufacturing, scale up processes, replication of existing processing or the external sourcing of other key materials may negatively impact the Company's ability to generate profit in future and add to costs incurred to rectify and an unknown period of time.

Platform Expansion Activities are Innovative and remain at clinical stage technological development: The Company's platform technology expansion activities are at a clinical stage of development and further development is necessary. If the Company's proposed products are shown to be appropriate for human application or ineffective for its initial intended purposes, or have additional applications that may require further investigation, or the cost of commercial scale manufacture becomes too expensive, the value of the Company's technology platform and resulting value of its Shares may be materially harmed.

Product liability: As with all new products, even after the granting of new regulatory approvals, there is no assurance that unforeseen product failure, adverse events or defects will not arise. Adverse events could expose the Company to product liability claims or litigation, resulting in the removal of the regulatory approval for the relevant products and/or monetary damages being awarded against the Company. In such event, the Company's liability may exceed the Company's insurance coverage.

Reliance on key personnel: The Company currently employs a number of key management and scientific personnel. The Company's future depends on retaining and attracting suitably qualified personnel. The Company has included in its employment with key personnel, terms aimed at providing incentives attractive for the recruitment and retention of such personnel. It has also, as far as legally possible, established contractual mechanisms through employment and consultancy contracts to limit the ability of key personnel to join a competitor or compete directly with the Company. Despite these measures, however, there is no guarantee that the Company will be able to attract and retain suitably qualified personnel, and a failure to do so could materially and adversely affect the value of the Company's technology and resulting value of its Shares may be materially harmed.

Dependence on service providers: The Company intends to operate a significant amount of its key activities through a series of contractual relationships with licensees, independent contractors, manufacturers, suppliers and distributors. All of the Company's contracts carry a risk that the third parties do not adequately or fully comply with its' or their respective contractual rights and obligations. Such failure can lead to termination and/or significant damage to the Company's research, development and commercialisation efforts that may add time and additional costs.

Product Performance: While the Company will only sell products for the approved intended use or an intended use that is accredited by a regulatory body, it is possible that commercial product performance will not reflect the performance seen in clinic studies and investigational evaluations. Furthermore, there is no guarantee that the product performance will satisfy the intended customer's needs in terms of performance, price or other variable.

6.3 Concluding Comment

The above factors, and others not specifically referred to above, may in the future materially affect the financial performance of the Company and the value of the New Options under this Prospectus or any Shares issued on conversion of the New Options. 1. Subject to clause 2 and any restrictions imposed by the ASX Limited (ASX), each Option is exercisable at any time after the date it is issued (Issue Date), until and including their expiry date, namely 5 pm (AEDT) on 30 November 2027 (Expiry Date). Any Options not exercised by the Expiry Date will automatically lapse at 5 pm on the Expiry Date.
2. The Options may be exercised for part or all of the Options held at a particular time by the Option Holder paying to the Company at its registered office prior to the Expiry Date the exercise price of A$0.20 per Option (Exercise Price).
3. On receipt by the Company of the payment of the Exercise Price, the Company must, within 5 Business Days and if the Shares are listed on the ASX within the time period prescribed by the Listing Rules of the ASX (ASX Listing Rules):
