Miramar’s Managing Director, Ms Marion Bush, said: “The JMEI credits are an Australian Government financial incentive for shareholders to invest in small mineral exploration companies like Miramar, who are conducting greenfields exploration in Australia. Our decision to voluntarily apply for this incentive sees the Company converting a portion of its tax losses from greenfields mineral exploration expenditure, into refundable tax offsets or franking credits for distribution to eligible shareholders who have supported us in our capital raises in the last financial year. We continue our strategy and aim of creating shareholder value through discovery and will keep investors updated on our exploration progress and successes.”
