About Nodestream™

Nodestream™ is the Company's network-optimised remote-operations platform. It enables secure, resilient, real-time transmission of video, voice, telemetry and data for situational awareness and remote control across mission-critical environments, operating efficiently over minimal bandwidth (from 8 kbit/s) and any available network — including congested, contested or degraded satellite and cellular links. Nodestream™ is available in multiple configurations and form factors, from compact embedded modules to software applications for Linux and Windows, and at its most advanced end is configured for defence and government security use cases where performance, survivability and reliability are paramount.
