Iress announces planned CFO transition as it enters next phase

Iress Limited (ASX: IRE) ("Iress" or "The Company") today announced a planned transition in its Chief Financial Officer role as the Company moves into the next phase of its strategy, focused on product evolution and sustainable growth.

After three years in the role, Cameron Williamson will step down as Iress' Chief Financial Officer. Iress' Board has commenced an international search for his successor. Mr Williamson will remain in the role over the remainder of the year to oversee an orderly transition, including supporting the delivery of the Company's FY26 financial commitments.

Since joining in July 2023, Mr Williamson has played a central role in simplifying Iress' portfolio, as well as strengthening the Company's balance sheet and embedding financial discipline that has underpinned materially improved earnings.

Iress' Chair, Roger Sharp, said: "Cam has made an outstanding contribution to Iress. Since joining in 2023, he has been instrumental in reshaping the portfolio, strengthening the balance sheet and restoring financial rigour and profitability. Iress is considerably stronger as a result of his contribution. The Board thanks him for his leadership and commitment and offers him well wishes for the future."

Iress' Group CEO & Managing Director, Andrew Russell, said: "I have greatly valued Cam's support and commitment since my appointment, as we have moved the business forward at pace. I thank him personally for his contribution to Iress. Cam will remain closely engaged throughout the remainder of FY26 to support the delivery of our strategic priorities and ensure a thorough handover to his successor. I wish him every success for the future."

This announcement was authorised by the Iress Board.
