1. A concise summary¹ of the rights and obligations of security holders under the law of its home jurisdiction and/or the rules of its home exchange covering:
 - what types of transactions require security holder approval;
 - whether security holders have a right to request or requisition a meeting of security holders;
 - whether security holders have a right to appoint proxies to attend and vote at meetings on their behalf;
 - how changes in the rights attaching to securities are regulated;
 - what rights do security holders have to seek relief for oppressive conduct;
 - what rights do security holders have to bring or intervene in legal proceedings on behalf of the entity; and
 - whether there is any equivalent to the "two strikes" rule in relation to remuneration reports in Part 2G.2 Division 9 of the Corporations Act (Guidance Note 4 section 2.3)

- Transactions requiring security holder approval include: reverse takeovers (being a transaction where the percentage ratio in respect of a class test is over 100%); employee share schemes and long-term incentive plan arrangements, and discounted share option arrangements (UK listing rules). Certain general corporate actions also require shareholder approval, including: article amendments; alterations to share capital; share buybacks; reductions of share capital; winding-up, and appointment of a liquidator for a solvency liquidation (Jersey law).
- General meetings: Shareholders holding at least 10% of the share capital can requisition a general meeting (Jersey law).
- Proxies: shareholders may appoint proxies to attend and vote at general meetings on their behalf. Articles must stipulate that proxies have the right to vote on a poll (Jersey law).
- Changes in share rights: unless articles provide otherwise, changes to the rights of a class of shares requires approval by holders of not less than two-thirds of that class. Members of a class whose rights were altered holding at least 10% of that class may apply to court to have variation cancelled (Jersey law).

¹ The concise summary is not intended to be a legal treatise on the laws of the entity's home jurisdiction or a detailed comparative analysis of those laws with the laws of Australia. For those matters where the entity's home jurisdiction has broadly comparable laws to Australia, a statement to that effect will generally suffice.

Court may order various things, including regulating future conduct, require the company not to do something, or providing that company must acquire the rights from a member (Jersey law). • Proceedings on behalf of company: a relief for oppressive conduct (discussed above) that court may grant is authorising civil proceedings to be brought in the name of the company. Otherwise, Jersey common law has certain rights for a company's shareholders to bring proceedings on behalf of the company, primarily linked to the company's misconduct (Jersey law). • Two-strikes rule: no equivalent under Jersey law or that applies to London Stock Exchange companies.
2. A concise summary² of the obligations of the entity under the law of its home jurisdiction and/or the rules of its home exchange regarding: • the disclosure of material information; • the disclosure of periodic financial information and the accounting and auditing standards that apply; • requirements for information to be sent to security holders; and • regulation of dealings with directors and controlling holders of equity securities (Guidance Note 4 section 2.3)	• Disclosure of material information: required to disclose inside information being information that is certain, not public and likely price-sensitive. Certain exceptions, including where the entity can ensure confidentiality of that information. (UK Market Abuse Regulations). (UK Listing Rules) • Disclosure of financial information: Jersey companies must prepare financial accounts for period of not over 18 months. Accounts for publicly traded companies must be prepared in accordance with prescribed generally accepted account principles. These include principles of certain nations (i.e. UK and US) or IFRS or IASB. Glencore plc's accounts are prepared in accordance with IFRS (Jersey law). UK Listing Rules require certain additional information to be included in accounts, such as whether any directors have an interest in a significant contract. • Information to be sent to security holders: shareholders have a right to
